The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 6-10 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Hung (Victor) in view of Wixey ('909).

Hung (Victor) shows a lift jack that has both a rapid rise/low pressure mechanical actuator and a slow rise/high pressure hydraulic actuator. Hung does not describe specifically the oil reservoir, drive pump, and the necessary valves. Wixey does describe the necessary oil reservoir, drive pump, and the necessary valves. It would have been obvious to provide the Wixey hydraulic circuitry for the Hung jack. One of ordinary skill in the art would have been motivated to do this in order to provide the proper hydraulics for the rapid rise/low pressure condition. Hung does not specifically address whether or not there is an oil vacuum relief valve for allowing oil to flow from the oil reservoir into the hydraulic cylinder during the lifting. Wixey however does teach such a suction valve 116 (Wixey, column 4, lines 40-48). To provide in Hung an oil vacuum relief valve in Hung would have been obvious at the time of the invention in view of the teachings of Wixey. One skilled in the art would have been motivated to do this in order to eliminate the vacuum behind the piston. Further, Hung does not specifically address whether or not there is a safety overpressure relief valve in the hydraulic circuit. Wixey teaches the use of an overpressure relief valve 36 (see column 4, lines 18-22). To employ an overpressure relief valve in the above applied structure of Hung in view of Hung would have been obvious for one skilled in the art at the time the invention was made in view of the disclosure of Wixley. One of ordinary skill in the art would have been motivated to do this in order to enhance the safety of the jack.

Claims 1-5 and 11-16 are allowed.
